Parenting Plan

A Parenting Plan is a court order that says who has the right to spend time with and make decisions for a child. It will include:

- Which parent the children will live with most of the time (custody)
- How much time the children will spend with each parent
- Who will make major decisions about the children, including school and medical care

- How the parents will work out major disagreement about the Parenting
 Plan
- If there are serious safety concerns, the Parenting Plan can include restrictions (limitations) on a parent

Washington courts generally don't use the words custody and visitation. They talk about the residential schedule and decision-making authority for the children.

How can I get a Parenting Plan?

A judge will order a Parenting Plan as part of a family law court case such as:

- Divorce
- Petition for a Parenting Plan (for unmarried parents after parentage is decided)
- Petition to Change Parenting Plan

"Judge" here refers to judges and court commissioners.

Someone who is not a legal parent can't get a Parenting Plan.

- If you believe you are a parent but you're not legally recognized as one, you must first establish legal parentage before getting a Parenting Plan.
- If you want custody of a child and you're not the child's parent, you may get a court order called a Residential Schedule as part of a minor guardianship case. Before 2021, this was called non-parent custody.

• If you're a relative who wants the legal right to visit with a child, you can petition the court for non-parent visitation rights.

When do I file a Parenting Plan?

You can file a Parenting Plan form at different stages of your family law case:

- Beginning with your petition or response
- Middle with a motion for temporary orders
- End with your final orders

You can fill out a Parenting Plan form as a proposal, an order, or an agreement.

- Proposal A Parenting Plan proposal tells the other parent and the judge what you want.
- Order A judge signs a Parenting Plan order after making a decision at a temporary orders hearing or trial. If the judge has already made a decision, you must fill out the Parenting Plan order to show the judge's actual decision, even if it is different from what you asked for.
- Agreement If you and the other parent agree, fill out the Parenting Plan to show the agreement you made. If you both sign the Proposal and Order versions of the plan, the judge will most likely approve it.

Answer a few questions on Get Family and Safety Forms to get the right forms for your situation.

You must have a copy of your proposed Parenting Plan and related papers delivered to (served on) every other party in the case. There are different rules for serving papers to start a case, and serving papers after a case has started.

What's the difference between a temporary and a final Parenting Plan?

Family law cases can take many months from start to finish. Temporary orders, including temporary Parenting Plans, put rules in place for the short-term while the case is in progress. The final Parenting Plan, which the judge makes to end your court case, is meant to be permanent, or at least to cover a much longer period. Because of that, it's easier to change temporary orders than it is to change final orders.

()Can I get a Parenting Plan in Washington State?

It depends. Washington may not have the legal authority (jurisdiction) to make a Parenting Plan if:

- Your children live in a different state
- The children haven't been living in Washington for at least 6 months
- Another state has already made an order about the children

If any of these describes your situation, try to talk to a lawyer before trying to file for a Parenting Plan in Washington State.

Will the judge approve my Parenting Plan?

It depends:

- If you and the other parent agree on a proposed Parenting Plan: the judge will usually approve it.
- If you and the other parent disagree: the judge will decide on a Parenting Plan after hearing or trial. The judge will look at many things when deciding, most importantly what's in the children's best interests. See Chapter 2: Who gets custody?

2. Who gets custody?

In Washington, a Parenting Plan doesn't award custody. Instead, it has a Parenting Time Schedule that says when the children will live with each parent. If the parents don't agree on a schedule, the judge will decide one in the children's best interest.

First the judge must consider if either parent has serious problems that affect the children.

Examples: abandonment, neglect, abuse, domestic violence, sex offense, drug or alcohol abuse, emotional, physical, or other problems.

For certain problems, the judge must limit a parent's time with the children. For other problems, the judge may set limits. See Chapter 3: Limitations and restrictions.

Next, the judge considers the children's relationship with each parent. This is the most important factor. The judge will probably order that the children live with the parent with whom they're most closely bonded. The judge will also consider:

- Agreements the parents have made
- Each parent's past and future potential for taking care of the children
- Each child's emotional needs and developmental level
- The children's relationships with siblings and other important adults, the children's involvement with school, and the children's activities and community
- The parents' wishes
- A mature child's wishes—usually a teenager
- Each parent's work schedule

The judge shouldn't look at which parent earns more or if a parent is going to remarry.

Can I ask for a Parenting Plan that gives us joint custody?

It depends. Washington judges don't automatically make final Parenting Plans that split custody 50/50. Under state law you must meet these requirements:

- There are no legal reasons for the judge to limit either parent's time with the children and
- You've both agreed to the schedule or
- You have a history of cooperation and shared parenting, and live close enough and

• Joint custody is in the children's best interests.

Even if you meet these requirements, you might want to talk to a lawyer (https://wlh.netlify.app/en/get-legal-help) about joint custody before agreeing to it or asking for it in a Parenting Plan. Joint custody requires a real commitment from both parents to work together regularly.

3. Limitations and restrictions

If you believe the other parent may harm the children (or harm you), you can ask the judge to limit the other parent's time with the children. Limitations are covered in Attachments A and B of the Parenting Plan form.

Reasons to put limitations on a parent

()Generally, the judge must limit a parent's time with their children if that parent has engaged in any of these, or lives with someone who they know has engaged in any of these:

- Long-term willful abandonment of the children or the parent substantially refuses to care for the children.
- Physical, sexual, or a pattern of emotional abuse of children.
- A history of domestic violence, or an assault or a sexual assault causing serious bodily harm or the fear of it.
- Sex offense or sexual abuse of a child.

The judge may limit a parent's time if they find any of these:

- The parent has neglected the children or hasn't cared for them.
- The parent has a long-term emotional or physical problem interfering with their ability to take care of the children.
- The parent has a long-term substance abuse problem interfering with their ability to take care of the children.
- The parent and children have no emotional bond or a seriously damaged emotional bond.
- The parent has engaged in the abusive use of conflict, meaning they've misused conflict in an ongoing and deliberate way. This could include:
 - o Repeated, bad faith violations of court orders
 - Credible threats to harm the other parent, or to harm friends, family, or professionals who are helping the other parent
 - Using the child in conflict
 - Abusive use of the court system
- The parent has denied the other parent contact with the children for a long time without good reason.

A parent denying contact because they're trying to protect themselves or the children from the harm the other parent poses is taking protective action. This is good reason to deny contact.

()If the judge finds reason to limit a parent's time with the children, in most cases, the judge won't give that parent custody. A judge could order many other restrictions.

Limitations (restrictions)

The Parenting Plan can restrict a parent in any way you could reasonably expect to protect the children and, depending on the situation, the parent who has the children most of the time.

For example, the judge can require the restricted parent to see the children only when supervised by a professional supervisor. The judge must include clear written rules for the supervised parent to follow in Attachment C of the Parenting Plan. The supervised parent and supervisor must sign an Acknowledgment that they've read and agree to follow the parenting plan and Attachment C.

If the restricted parent can't afford a professional supervisor or can't get a supervisor for other reasons, such as they live too far from such resources, the judge may allow a lay person to supervise visits if they can prove they'll be able to protect the children.

If the supervised parent breaks (violates) the parenting plan or rules in Attachment C, or the supervisor can't or won't supervise that parent anymore, the other parent can get an immediate restraining order to stop (suspend) visits until the judge can review the situation.

Other common restrictions include:

- Be evaluated for domestic violence, substance abuse, mental health, or anger management issues, with input from the other parent.
- Complete domestic violence, substance abuse, or mental health treatment, or anger management.

- Take random drug or alcohol tests.
- Complete a parenting class.
- Get counseling or take any physician-prescribed medication for their mental health condition.
- Complete a sexual deviancy evaluation.
- Stop interfering with the other parent's contact with the children.
- Stop causing conflict or picking fights with the other parent for no good reason.

In some serious cases, if nothing else will protect the children, a judge may order that a parent has no contact with the children.

Sexual abuse

Generally, a judge must order no contact with the children if a parent has been found to be a sexually violent predator

(https://app.leg.wa.gov/RCW/default.aspx?cite=71.09) or if a judge found the parent sexually abused a child (their own or others). The sexual abuse finding could be a criminal conviction or a civil finding in any family law or dependency case, including the parenting plan case.

If a parent lives with someone who is a sexually violent predator or who sexually abused a child, the court generally must order no contact in the presence of that person.

Once a judge has found sexual abuse, they must follow very strict rules before allowing contact.

If there are sexual abuse issues in your case, talk with a lawyer.

4. Limitations on both parents

The judge may find reasons to put limitations on both parents in a parenting plan. When this happens, the judge must make detailed written findings about what's in the children's best interest and issue a parenting plan that best maintains the children's emotional growth, health and stability, and physical care. Normally, this would mean not changing the existing arrangement between each parent and the children.

When comparing the risks each parent poses to the children, generally the judge must take the mandatory reasons for limitations more seriously (abandonment, child abuse, domestic violence, assault, sexual abuse).

5. Decision-making

Either parent can make emergency decisions about the children and can make day-to-day decisions when the children are in that parent's care such as what the children will eat, or who will babysit the children.

A Parenting Plan will say if one or both parents can decide non-emergency decisions, such as where the children will go to school, which doctors the children see, and when the children get medical care. But the judge must order that only one parent can make these decisions if certain limiting factors apply to the other parent, or if neither parent wants joint decision-making.

The judge must order sole decision-making to one parent when they find the other has engaged in any of these:

- Long-term willful abandonment of the children or the parent substantially refuses to care for the children.
- Physical, sexual, or a pattern of emotional abuse of children.
- A history of domestic violence, or an assault or a sexual assault causing serious bodily harm or the fear of it.

If any of these are true and the judge wants to order shared decision-making anyway, the judge must make written findings of the clear and convincing evidence that persuaded them not to limit decision making.

The judge may order sole decision-making to one parent if both parents are against shared decision-making, or one is against it, and the judge finds there are good reasons for this.

You can include other types of decisions in your Parenting Plan that are important to your family. For example: extracurricular activities, international travel, cell phones, driver's licenses, tattoos, or haircuts.

Religious upbringing: Unless the judge decides that exposure to a parent's religious views may harm the children, the judge should let each parent give the children the religious instruction the parent chooses while the children are with that parent. This isn't "joint" decision-making. It's each parent making decisions on that parent's time and not interfering with the other parent's decisions.

6. Disagreements

The Parenting Plan asks you to choose a way to solve future disagreements about what it says or means. You can go back to court or choose "Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR)." ADR means alternatives to court, including counseling, mediation, and arbitration. ADR can help you solve disagreements without going back to court.

If your Parenting Plan says ADR is required, you must try ADR before going to back court over a disagreement.

You can always go back to court to solve a disagreement if ADR doesn't work, or if it's not required.

The judge should not require ADR if any of these are true:

- A limiting factor applies to a parent.
- The parents can't take part in dispute resolution equally.
- One of you can't afford alternative dispute resolution.

ADR choices

If you choose counseling, you'll typically meet with a mental health professional who will use counseling techniques to help resolve your disagreement.

If you choose mediation, you'll meet with a mediator. A mediator is a neutral third party who may be a lawyer, retired judge or court commissioner, or mental health professional. The mediator will try to get you to come to an agreement.

If you choose an arbitrator, you'll meet with a neutral third party (a lawyer, or retired judge or court commissioner) who may try to help you reach agreement, but who will make a decision you both must follow if you cannot.

If the Parenting Plan calls for arbitration, you can file a motion with the court asking for a review of the arbitrator's decision.

You must usually pay a counselor, mediator, or arbitrator. It can cost a lot. But ADR can help you avoid the stress, expense, and unpredictability of court.

7. Enforcement

Once the judge signs a Parenting Plan, it becomes a court order. Both parents must follow it. For example, you may not refuse to allow the other parent to see the children just because that parent hasn't paid child support.

If the other parent doesn't let you see the children when you have the right to, the judge may find the other parent in "contempt." The judge could order make-up visitation time, jail time, fines, or some other type of punishment. Depending on which part of the parenting plan you don't follow, you might even face criminal charges for custodial interference.

Beware: If you have custody, and a judge finds you in contempt more than once in a 3-year period, the judge might give the other parent custody.

You might be able to avoid contempt or criminal charges if you have a good excuse for not following the parenting plan. For example, if following the order would cause you or the children serious harm, that would be a good excuse. Even then, you can't simply refuse to follow the court order. You must return to court to ask for changes to the order.

If you don't want to follow part of a Parenting Plan, you should get the other parent's written permission not to. If that doesn't work, you should contact a lawyer. You might be able to file a motion or petition to change your parenting plan.

8. Changes

A Parenting Plan can be hard to change after a judge signs it, especially if it's a final Parenting Plan. But it is possible. You must go through a court process to change your Parenting Plan.

- If the parents agree to the change, a judge will usually, but not always, change a Parenting Plan, whether it's temporary or final.
- If the parents don't agree to change a temporary Parenting Plan, you can usually file a motion for new temporary orders.

• If the parents don't agree to change a final Parenting Plan, you can file a petition to change parenting plan. A judge may make major changes such as custody only if a major change has taken place in the children's or other parent's life since the judge signed the original parenting plan. It's not enough that the parent wanting the change thinks their life has gotten better and should now have custody.

Answer a few questions on Get Family and Safety Forms to get the right forms for your situation.

Here are some examples of when a judge will make major changes to a Parenting Plan:

- The children have gone to live with one parent for a long time with the permission of the parent who has custody under the Parenting Plan.
- The parent who doesn't want the change has been held in contempt of court at least twice in 3 years, or has been convicted of interfering with the other parent's custody or visitation.
- The present custody situation is physically or emotionally harmful to the children.

The judge can make smaller (minor) changes to a final Parenting Plan more easily. For example, a judge can make minor changes to the amount of time or certain days the children spend with either parent if it's in the children's best interests.

9. Moving (Relocation)

Once you have a Final Parenting Plan, you can probably legally move away with the children if you do what the Parenting Plan says. All Parenting Plans have a section on moving with the children that summarizes state law:

- You usually must give the other parent notice beforehand. (There are a few exceptions to this.)
- You usually must give the other parent a chance to object to a move outside the school district.
- The other parent can ask the court to change your Parenting Plan, including who the children live with, if you ask to move the children outside of the school district.

9. Moving with the Children (Relocation)

Anyone with majority or substantially equal residential time (at least 45 percent) who wants to move with the children must notify every other person who has court-ordered time with the children.

Move to a different school district

If the move is to a different school district, the relocating person must complete the form Notice of Intent to Move with Children (FL Relocate 701) and deliver it at least 60 days before the intended move.

Exceptions:

- If the relocating person could not reasonably have known enough information to complete the form in time to give 60 days' notice, they must give notice within 5 days after learning the information.
- If the relocating person is relocating to a domestic violence shelter or moving to avoid a clear, immediate, and unreasonable risk to health or safety, notice may be delayed 21 days.
- If information is protected under a court order or the address confidentiality program, it may be withheld from the notice.
- A relocating person who believes that giving notice would put themself or a child at unreasonable risk of harm, may ask the court for permission to leave things out of the notice or to be allowed to move without giving notice. Use form Motion to Limit Notice of Intent to Move with Children (Ex Parte) (FL Relocate 702).

The Notice of Intent to Move with Children can be delivered by having someone personally serve the other party or by any form of mail that requires a return receipt.

If the relocating person wants to change the Parenting Plan because of the move, they must deliver a proposed Parenting Plan together with the Notice.

Move within the same school district

If the move is within the same school district, the relocating person still has to let the other parent know. However, the notice does not have to be served personally or by mail with a return receipt. Notice to the other party can be made in any reasonable way. No specific form is required.

Warning! If you do not notify...

A relocating person who does not give the required notice may be found in contempt of court. If that happens, the court can impose sanctions. Sanctions can include requiring the relocating person to bring the children back if the move has already happened and ordering the relocating person to pay the other side's costs and lawyer's fees.

Right to object

A person who has court-ordered time with the children can object to a move to a different school district and/or to the relocating person's proposed Parenting Plan. If the move is within the same school district, the other party doesn't have the right to object to the move, but they may ask to change the Parenting Plan if there are adequate reasons under the modification law (RCW 26.09.260).

An objection is made by filing the Objection about Moving with Children and Petition about Changing a Parenting/Custody Order (Relocation) (form FL Relocate 721). File your Objection with the court and serve a copy on the relocating person and anyone else who has court-ordered time with the children. Service of the Objection must be by personal service or by mailing a copy to each person by any form of mail that requires a return receipt. The Objection must be filed and served no later than 30 days after the Notice of Intent to Move with Children was received.

Right to move

During the 30 days after the Notice was served, the relocating person may not move to a different school district with the children unless they have a court order allowing the move.

After the 30 days, if no Objection is filed, the relocating person may move with the children without getting a court order allowing the move.

After the 30 days, if an Objection has been filed, the relocating person may move with the children pending the final hearing on the Objection unless:

- The other party gets a court order saying the children cannot move, or
- The other party has scheduled a hearing to take place no more than 15 days after the date the Objection was served on the relocating person. (However, the relocating person may ask the court for an order allowing the move even though a hearing is pending if the relocating person believes that they or a child are at unreasonable risk of harm.)

The court may make a different decision about the move at a final hearing on the Objection.

Parenting Plan after move

If the relocating person served a proposed Parenting Plan with the Notice, and if no Objection is filed within 30 days after the Notice was served (or if the parties agree):

- Both parties may follow that proposed plan without being held in contempt of the Parenting Plan that was in place before the move. However, the proposed plan cannot be enforced by contempt unless it has been approved by a court.
- Either party may ask the court to approve the proposed plan. Use form Ex Parte Motion for Final Order Changing Parenting Plan – No Objection to Moving with Children (FL Relocate 706).

Attachment A: Limitations

Only complete this attachment if your Parenting Plan involves limitations on a parent under RCW 26.09.191 or .192. If not, remove this attachment.

- 1. Reasons for putting limitations on a parent (under RCW 26.09.191 or .192)
 - a. Abandonment by a parent, or child abuse, domestic violence, assault, sex offense, or sexual abuse of a child by a parent or a person living with a parent.

If a parent has any of these problems, the court must limit that parent's contact with the children and that parent's right to make decisions for the children, and may not require dispute resolution other than court unless the court makes the required findings in 3. See definitions at the end of this attachment. ☐ Neither parent has any of these problems. ☐ A parent has one or more of these problems as follows (check all that apply): ☐ Abandonment – (Parent's name): intentionally abandoned a child in this case for an extended time. ☐ Child Abuse – (Parent's name): (or someone living in that parent's home) abused or threatened to abuse a child. The abuse was (check all that apply): □ physical □ repeated emotional abuse. □ Domestic Violence – (Parent's name): (or someone living in that parent's home) has a history of domestic violence as defined in RCW 7.105.010. \square Assault – (Parent's name): (or someone living in that parent's home) has assaulted someone causing grievous physical harm or causing fear of such harm, or sexually assaulted someone. ☐ Sex offense or sexual abuse of a child by a parent or a person living with a parent. (Also complete Attachment B.) b. Other problems that may harm the children's best interests or interfere with the performance of parenting functions. These problems could include neglect, emotional or physical problems, substance abuse, lack of emotional ties, abusive use of conflict, withholding the child, or other problems. If a parent has any of these problems, the court may limit that parent's contact with the children and that parent's right to make decisions for the children. ☐ Neither parent has any of these problems. ☐ A parent has one or more of these problems as follows (check all that apply): □ Neglect – (Parent's name): neglected their parental duties towards a child in this case. ☐ Emotional or physical problem – (Parent's name):

Definitions For Limitations in Parenting Plans (RCW 26.09.191):

"Abusive Use of Conflict" refers to a party engaging in ongoing and deliberate actions to misuse conflict. This includes, but is not limited to:

- (a) Repeated bad faith violations of court orders regarding the child or the protection of the child or other parent;
- (b) credible threats of physical, emotional, or financial harm to the other parent or to family, friends, or professionals providing support to the child or other parent;
- (c) intentional use of the child in conflict; or
- (d) abusive litigation as defined in RCW 26.51.020.

Litigation that is aggressive or improper but does not meet the definition of abusive litigation shall not constitute a basis for finding abusive use of conflict. Protective actions, as defined below, shall not constitute a basis for a finding of abusive use of conflict.

"Child" shall also mean "children."

"Knowingly" means knows or reasonably should know.

"Parenting functions" means those aspects of the parent-child relationship in which the parent makes decisions and performs functions necessary for the care and growth of the child. Parenting functions include:

- (a) Maintaining a loving, stable, consistent, and nurturing relationship with the child;
- (b) Attending to the daily needs of the child, such as feeding, clothing, physical care and grooming, supervision, health care, and day care, and engaging in other activities which are appropriate to the developmental level of the child and that are within the social and economic circumstances of the particular family;
- (c) Attending to adequate education for the child, including remedial or other education essential to the best interests of the child:
- (d) Assisting the child in developing and maintaining appropriate interpersonal relationships;
- (e) Exercising appropriate judgment regarding the child's welfare, consistent with the child's developmental level and the family's social and economic circumstances; and
- (f) Providing for the financial support of the child.

- "Protective actions" are actions taken by a parent in good faith for the purpose of protecting themselves or the parent's child from the risk of harm posed by the other parent. "Protective actions" can include, but are not limited to:
- (a) Reports or complaints regarding physical, sexual, or mental abuse of a child or child neglect to an individual or entity connected to the provision of care or safety of the child such as law enforcement, medical professionals, therapists, schools, day cares, or child protective services;
- (b) seeking court orders changing residential time; or
- (c) petitions for protection or restraining orders.
- "Sex offense against a child" means any of the following offenses involving a child victim:
- (a) Any sex offense as defined in RCW 9.94A.030;
- (b) any offense with a finding of sexual motivation;
- (c) any offense in violation of chapter 9A.44 RCW other than RCW 9A.44.132;
- (d) any offense involving the sexual abuse of a minor, including any offense under chapter 9.68A RCW; or
- (e) any federal or out-of-state offense comparable to any offense under (a) through (d).
- "Willful abandonment" has occurred when the child's parent has expressed, either by statement or conduct, an intent to forego, for an extended period, parental rights or responsibilities despite an ability to exercise such rights and responsibilities. "Willful abandonment" does not include a parent who has been unable to see the child due to circumstances that include, but are not limited to: incarceration, deportation, inpatient treatment, medical emergency, fleeing to an emergency shelter or domestic violence shelter, or withholding of the child by the other parent.
