If you have debt, the person or company you owe might sue you or try to “garnish” your bank account or paycheck. The law might protect (exempt) some of your income and property from garnishment by creditors, even when a creditor has a court order against you.

1. What is garnishment

If a creditor sues you over a debt, don’t ignore court papers! Try to talk with a lawyer right away. You should also respond in writing to the lawsuit.

Garnishment is when someone freezes money in your bank account or your paycheck to get money a court says you owe to them. They can only do this if a judge enters a court order called a judgment against you. If you’re served with a lawsuit from a debt collector and you don’t respond, they may get a judgment against you.

You may not get a warning before the garnishment happens.

Most garnishments are judgments for debts from credit cards, doctor and hospital bills, utility and phone bills, personal loans from a bank or credit union, debts owed to a landlord, or other debt for personal, family, or household purposes. These types of debts are called consumer debt.

The law protects (exempts) some types and amounts of income and property from garnishment by the person or company you owe, called the creditor. A creditor usually can't take exempt funds or property from you to pay off a debt, even if the creditor has a judgment against you.

There are a few exceptions to this. If you owe child support, federal student loans, or certain some other debts to the federal government, the creditor can garnish any of your income or property.

2. Exemptions

Here are the types of income that a creditor can't take from you to pay off a debt:

- Social Security disability (<https://www.ssa.gov/disability>) and retirement (<https://www.ssa.gov/retirement>) benefits (unless you owe child support, federal student loans, or a federal tax debt)
- Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits (<https://www.ssa.gov/ssi>)
- Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) (<https://www.dshs.wa.gov/esa/community-services-offices/temporary-assistance-needy-families>) benefits (state welfare)
- Aged, Blind, or Disabled (ABD) (<https://www.dshs.wa.gov/esa/community-services-offices/aged-blind-or-disabled-cash-program>) benefits (state disability)
- Unemployment Compensation (<https://esd.wa.gov/get-financial-help/unemployment-benefits>) (unless you owe child support)
- VA (Veteran's Administration) (<https://benefits.va.gov/benefits/>) benefits (with some exceptions for money you owe the government or for support)
- Federal student loans
- Child support you receive
- Most pensions
- Workers compensation (<https://www.lni.wa.gov/claims/for-workers/injured-what-you-need-to-know/>)

These are general exemptions. Every case is different. Try to talk to a lawyer about your situation.

3. Wages

Some or all of what your job pays you (your wages) might be exempt from garnishment, depending on what the debt or judgment is for.

Consumer judgments: If you earn less than any of these amounts, none of your wages can be garnished:

- $599.55 weekly (35 times the state minimum hourly wage (<https://www.lni.wa.gov/workers-rights/wages/minimum-wage/>), which is $17.13/hour in 2026)
- $1,199.10 every 2 weeks
- $1,299.03 twice a month
- $2,598.05 monthly

Even if you earn more than these amounts, you can keep 35 times the state minimum hourly wage or 80% of your net pay, whichever is more. Net pay is your earnings after subtracting mandatory deductions. Mandatory deductions include Social Security, Medicare, and federal income taxes.

Private student loan judgments: If you earn less than these amounts, none of your wages can be garnished:

- $1,082.50 weekly (50 times the highest minimum hourly wage in the State, which is $21.65/hour (<https://www.tukwilawa.gov/departments/finance/minimum-wage-and-fair-access-to-additional-hours-of-work/>))
- $2,165.00 every 2 weeks
- $2,345.42 twice a month
- $4,690.83 monthly

Even if you earn more than these amounts, you can keep 50 times the highest minimum hourly wage in the State or 85% of your net pay, whichever is more.

Other judgments: If you earn less than these amounts, none of your wages can be garnished.

- $253.75 weekly
- $507.50 every 2 weeks
- $549.80 twice a month
- $1,099.58 monthly

Even if you earn more than these amounts, you can keep 35 times the federal minimum wage or 75% of your net pay, whichever is more.

You can read the law that sets these exemption amounts at RCW 6.27.150 (<https://app.leg.wa.gov/rcw/default.aspx?cite=6.27.150>).

Child support: 50% of your net pay is protected from garnishment.

4. Exempt property

The equity in the home you live in is exempt from creditors if it's worth less than the median sale price of a single-family home in your county the previous calendar year (<https://wcrer.be.uw.edu/housing-market-data-toolkit/annual-median-price/>).

Equity is the amount of money you would keep after you sold your home and paid off the mortgage and other liens.

5. Bank accounts

Starting July 1, 2025, a bank will automatically exempt $2,000 of your bank account. If you're married or have a registered domestic partner, each spouse or partner is entitled to your own exemptions of personal property. You can combine your exemptions with the other spouse's exemption in the same property, including any bank accounts you have together, for a total of $4,000 protection of your shared bank account.

If a bank tries to garnish your account before July 1, it's more complicated. Try to get legal help right away.

6. Preventing garnishment

Never give creditors permission to withdraw money from your bank account.

Here are some tips to help you keep from being garnished in the first place. What you can do depends on what type of income and debt you have.

- Pensions: Most, but not all, pensions are exempt from garnishment even after you get your pension check. Avoid having your pension checks direct-deposited into a bank account. See if the pension fund can mail checks directly to your home.
- If your debt is with a bank: You shouldn't keep a savings or checking account at a bank that you owe money to. For example, if you owe money on a credit card or loan from the same bank where you have a checking account, that bank could take money from your bank account (where another bank couldn't).

7. Supplemental proceedings

A creditor who has a judgment against you may try to get information from you about whether and how they can collect what you owe them by scheduling a court proceeding called a Supplemental Proceeding. If you have exempt income or property, this is a good chance to let the creditor know. Read about Supplemental Proceedings to learn more.

8. Notice of Garnishment

Exemption Claim (Writ directed to employer to garnish earnings) (GARN 01.0520)

If a bank or employer or other third party has your property, including money in a bank account, your creditor can get a written court order of garnishment (called a writ of garnishment) that goes to the third party. Then the creditor must mail or deliver to (serve on) you both of these:

1. A Notice of Garnishment and Your Rights
(<https://www.courts.wa.gov/forms/documents/GARN%2001.0450%20Notice%20of%20Garnis>)
2. An Exemption Claim form directed to a bank or an employer

The garnishee is the party who has your property, such as the bank holding your money.

If you receive the writ of garnishment within 7 days of the date of the court issuing it, you must fill out the right Exemption Claim for your situation and hand-deliver one copy to the court clerk and mail or hand-deliver one to the creditor or creditor's lawyer (whoever signed the writ of garnishment), within 28 days after the date on the writ of garnishment.

If you receive the writ more than 7 days from the date of the writ's issuance, you have 21 days to fill out the appropriate Exemption Claim for your situation and mail or hand-deliver one copy to the court clerk and mail or hand-deliver one to the creditor or their lawyer.

The creditor has 7 days after getting your exemption claim form to object to it.

- If the creditor doesn't object, the creditor must direct the garnishee to give back (release) the exempt property to you
(https://www.courts.wa.gov/forms/documents/GARN01_0590.pdf) no more than 10 days after the creditor gets your claim form.
- If the creditor objects, they must file a statement explaining why and schedule a court hearing within 14 days after getting your exemption claim form.

If the judge at the hearing orders the release of your exempt property, the creditor must deliver an order releasing the exempt property to the garnishee holding your property. If the creditor doesn't do this, try to talk to a lawyer. You can sue the creditor for any damages that you suffer, plus a $50 penalty, if they don't take steps to timely release your exempt property.
