Either the protected person or the restrained person can use this court procedure to change (modify) or end (terminate) a protection order. (Forms and instructions)

1. Fast facts

Community organizations can help! If you've experienced domestic violence, harassment, stalking, or sexual assault, or the threat of any of these, get help from your local domestic violence shelter or sexual assault center. Shelters provide safety planning, temporary shelter, legal advocacy, counseling, and other services.

Who can change or end a protection order?

Protected person: You can ask a judge to change or end a protection order that protects you if you want to update it or you don't want or need it any longer. You might need more or fewer protections.

Restrained person: You can also ask a judge to change or end a protection order if you're the person the order restrains. But you'll need to be able to show the judge that there's been a "substantial change in circumstances" so that the protection order is no longer needed, or so that it's okay to change what the order says.

"Judge" here refers to judges and court commissioners.

Will I have to pay to ask to change or end my protection order?

No, you don't have to pay a filing fee. But there may be copying fees and fees for delivering the papers to the other person (()serving the other person) ().

How easy or hard is it to change or end a protection order?

It's generally easiest if the other party doesn't respond or show up at a court hearing to fight changing or ending the protection order, or if you and the other party both agree. But this only happens sometimes.

Protected person: You can ask at any time to change or end the protection order. It might be hard to convince a judge to end a protection order if the harm that caused you to need the protection order in the first place was severe.

Restrained person: There are limits to when you can ask to change or end a protection order, and when a judge will grant your request. You might have to pay the other party if the motion doesn't go your way.

- You can only ask to change or end the order once in every 12-month period.
- ()The judge can only change or end the order if you can prove that there's been a real change in the situation (a "substantial change in circumstances") that justifies changing or ending the order. Even then, the judge can still refuse to change or end the order if, for example, you've violated the order, you've been convicted of a crime since the order was entered, or you're still struggling with the substance use that led to the order in the first place. This isn't a complete list of reasons a judge could deny your motion. To learn more, read the state law at RCW 7.105.500 (https://app.leg.wa.gov/RCW/default.aspx?cite=7.105.500), or talk to a lawyer before filing anything.
- The judge can order you to reimburse the protected person for their expenses in responding to your motion, including attorney fees.

If I get the protection order changed, will it still last as long?

You can ask for the protection order to end (to expire) sooner, or to last longer.

What should I put in the motion form?

If you want to change the protection order, you should explain what happened (or hasn't happened) that makes you need these changes.

- Examples of reasons to add more protections: the restrained person has violated the protection order, has harmed or abused someone not protected by the order, has been convicted of any crime since you got the order, or has a continuing problem with alcohol or drug abuse. This isn't a complete list.
- Examples of reasons to take some protections out of the protection order: the restrained person completed rehab and has remained sober for some time, the restrained person completed anger management, or one of you moved away. This isn't a complete list.

If you want to end the protection order, you should explain your reasons why. You might need to go into a lot of detail if the reason for the protection order in the first place was because the harm was severe.

Will there be a hearing on my motion?

Protected person: Yes. The clerk will help you schedule a hearing on your motion.

Adding a child? If you had or adopted a child after you got your protection order and that child is already living with you, you can ask the judge to add that child to your protection order immediately (ex parte) without a hearing. If the restrained person is the other parent, you must then schedule a hearing on your motion to modify.

Restrained person: You must first ask for a hearing to decide if there's adequate cause (good reason) to have a full hearing on your motion. If the judge finds adequate cause, they will schedule a another hearing to decide your motion.

()Restrained person: To change or end the order, you should explain in the motion form what substantial change in circumstances has taken place that means that the other party no longer needs as many protections. You must also fill out a Restrained Person's Notice of Hearing to Decide Adequate Cause (form PO 065) and a proposed Finding of Adequate Cause and Order for Hearing on Restrained Person's Motion to Modify or Terminate Protection Order (form PO 064).

2. Step-by-step

- 1. Fill out the forms.
- 2. Attach any supporting evidence to your motion. Everything must be single sided on regular size paper. Organize your attachments so the judge can understand them. Add labels and dates to pictures, texts or emails.

Some confidential documents should be filed separately under a sealed cover sheet. This keeps them out of the public court file. You must still serve them on the other party. Examples: paystubs, tax returns, bank statements, benefit statements, medical or treatment records, special education records, confidential evaluations or reports.

If you're afraid for your safety or the children's safety, you can block out information identifying your location on the copies you file with the court and give the other party.

- 3. Make copies. Make 2 copies of every form you filled out, so you have one set of originals (for the clerk) and 2 sets of copies (one for you and one for the other party), except you don't need to make copies of or serve the Law Enforcement and Confidential Information Form.
- 4. File your forms with the court clerk. You can bring your originals and copies in person to the clerk's office of the court where you originally got your protection order. Or you can call the clerk first to ask if it's possible to file electronically.
- 5. Ask the clerk for help scheduling a hearing.

Protected person: The clerk may have a local form for this. If not, you can use the Notice of Hearing (form PO 062).

Restrained person: Ask the clerk when you can schedule a hearing for the judge to decide if there's adequate cause (good reason) to have a full hearing on your motion. Put the adequate cause hearing information on your Restrained Person's Notice of Hearing to Decide Adequate Cause (form PO 065). If the judge finds adequate cause, they will sign the Finding of Adequate Cause and Order for Hearing on Restrained Person's Motion to Modify or Terminate Protection Order (form PO 064).

6. Service. You must have a copy of the court papers delivered (served) to the other party as soon as possible. You can ask law enforcement to serve the papers, or you can find a process server or another adult to do it.

- 7. File proof of service. Whoever serves the other party must fill out written proof of service (also called a "return of service" or "affidavit of service"). If law enforcement is serving, they'll fill out and file this form. Otherwise, the server may give you the completed form for you to file with the court clerk, or they can file it themselves.
- 8. Go to the hearing. The judge decides here whether to change or end your protection order.

3. Get ready for hearing

Read our tips to get ready for trial. The hearing is like a very short trial. However, witnesses don't usually testify at protection order hearings. Witnesses can file a declaration form describing what they saw or heard.

You must file witness declarations and any other documents you want the judge to consider with the court clerk and have the restrained person served with a copy before the hearing date. It's best to file these at the same time as your petition, if you can.

If the restrained person doesn't get these copies beforehand, the judge may reschedule the hearing to give everyone time to read them. The reverse is also true: the restrained person must provide you with copies of anything they file. You have the same right to ask at the hearing for more time to review copies of anything served on you at the last minute.

Make some notes to yourself about the main points to make when it's your turn to talk at the full hearing. You may have no more than 5 minutes to speak.

If your hearing is in person, get to the courthouse early. If possible, don't bring your children.

If your hearing is by phone or video, follow these tips for phone and video hearings.

4. Hearing issues

If you know beforehand that you can't make the hearing, contact the court clerk about rescheduling. Otherwise, if you simply don't go to your hearing, the judge will dismiss your motion, and your protection order won't change or end.

Even if the other party hasn't been served 5 court days before your hearing, you must still go to the hearing.

5. At the hearing

If the other party doesn't show up but was properly served at least 5 court days before the hearing, the judge can go ahead without them. If the other party shows up for the hearing, the judge will let each of you speak, and then decide.

If the judge asks you a question, try to answer it directly. Don't interrupt the judge.

You may need to wait for the judge to write up the order. The clerk may give you a copy right away. If not, ask how you can get a copy.

6. What if I'm denied?

Restrained person: If your motion is denied, you can't file another motion to change or end the protection order for 12 months.

Within 10 days after the entry of the order you can ask for reconsideration or revision. If the 10th day falls on a weekend or judicial holiday, your deadline is the next judicial day.

- Ask for reconsideration if the decision was legally incorrect or you have newly discovered evidence.
- Ask for revision if your case was decided by a court commissioner (not a judge), and you want a judge to review the same evidence.

File your motion for reconsideration or revision with the court clerk.

You can file an appeal within 30 days after entry of the order. You have the right to a transcript or recording of the hearing.

If new evidence would support issuing a protection order, you can refile a petition for a protection order at any time.

Motion to Modify or Terminate Protection Order (PO 063)

Form attached:

Order Modifying or Terminating Protection Order (PO 066)

Form attached:

Law Enforcement and Confidential Information (LECIF) (PO 003)

You may need other forms depending on the situation:

- If you want to file written statements from other people in support of your motion, you can use a Declaration form
- If you want to file medical records, financial records, or confidential reports, you'll need a Sealed Cover Sheet to protect your privacy (keep them out of the public court record)
- If you're not planning to have law enforcement serve the papers, you'll need a Proof of Service form
- If you're the restrained person, you'll need additional forms.
