This is Washington's 'red flag' law. An extreme risk protection order (ERPO) requires a person to surrender any firearms they have and makes it illegal for them get firearms. You can get an ERPO against an intimate partner or family or household member who poses a significant danger to themselves or others. Law enforcement can also seek an ERPO.

ERPOs only restrict someone's access to firearms. If you need other protection, such as no harm, no contact, or stay away orders, consider other types of protection orders instead of an ERPO.

1. Before you file

Community organizations can help! If you've experienced domestic violence, harassment, stalking, or sexual assault, or the threat of any of these, get help from your local domestic violence shelter or sexual assault center. Shelters provide safety planning, temporary shelter, legal advocacy, counseling, and other services.

Visit Washington State Domestic Violence Information & Referral (https://www.domesticviolenceinforeferral.org/domestic-violence-programs) to search for local programs by county, or for culturally/community specific programs?field_county_value=All&field_program_catagory_tid=2).

(https://www.domesticviolenceinforeferral.org/domestic-violence-programs?field_county_value=All&field_program_catagory_tid=1) or Tribal programs

(https://www.domesticviolenceinforeferral.org/domestic-violence-

You can call, text, or chat online with advocates 24/7 at any of these:

- National Domestic Violence Hotline (https://www.thehotline.org/), 1-800-799-7233
- National Sexual Assault Hotline (https://rainn.org/resources), 1-800-656-4673

 (a peer support service of the National DV Hotline), 1-844-762-8483

To ask a judge for an extreme risk protection order (an ERPO), you must fill out and file the forms here. The Petition is a request for the judge to order the other person (the respondent) to turn their firearms over to law enforcement and not get or try to get other firearms. It lets you ask for a temporary protection order that starts right away, and a full protection order that can last a year, if approved by a judge.

"Judge" here refers to judges and court commissioners.

Decide if an ERPO is the right choice for you. Different types of protection orders are effective for many people, but they're not a good option for everyone.

Decide where to file. You can file for an extreme risk protection order in the Washington county where you live or the respondent lives.

Some courts may offer their own online forms or ways to ask for an extreme risk protection order online. Ask the court clerk for availability.

Decide which court to file in. If the respondent is age 18 or older, you should probably file for an ERPO in Superior Court. You can file in Municipal or District Court, but those courts can only give you a temporary order and then transfer your case to Superior Court. If the respondent is under age 18, you may file in Juvenile Court.

Decide if you're going to put your home address in your court papers. The protection order is a public document that anyone can see. If you're unsure, talk to an advocate (https://www.domesticviolenceinforeferral.org/domestic-violence-programs?field_county_value=All&field_program_catagory_tid=1).

Decide if you want or need an immediate order. If you ask for an immediate order, you must explain how the respondent may use firearms in the near future to harm themselves or someone else if you don't get an order now, before the respondent gets notice that you're asking for an ERPO.

Gather any supporting evidence, such as written statements, printed photos, or documents, that help prove what you're saying is true. If you have proof that the respondent abuses drugs or alcohol, include it now. If you get other evidence later, you can still file it before your hearing date, but try not to wait until the actual hearing to present evidence for the first time.

You might be able to get help filling out the forms. Ask the court clerk about local victim services organizations with advocates

(https://www.domesticviolenceinforeferral.org/domestic-violence-programs?field_county_value=All&field_program_catagory_tid=1) who can help with forms.

2. Step-by-step

- 1. Fill out the forms at the end of this guide. Choose the right Petition depending on whether the respondent is 18 or older, or under age 18.
- 2. Attach any supporting evidence to your petition. Everything must be single-sided on regular size paper. Organize your attachments so the judge can understand them. Add labels and dates to pictures, texts, or emails.

Some confidential documents should be filed separately under a sealed cover sheet. This keeps them out of the public court file. You must still serve them on the other party. Examples: paystubs, tax returns, bank statements, benefit statements, medical or treatment records, special education records, confidential evaluations or reports.

If you're afraid for your safety or the children's safety, you can block out information identifying your location on the copies you file with the court and give the other party.

- 3. File your forms with the court clerk. You can bring your completed papers in person to the clerk's office of the court you've chosen. Or you can call the clerk first to ask if it's possible to file electronically.
- 4. A judge reads your court papers the same day you file, or the next working court day if you file later in the day or when the court is closed. After reading your papers, the judge will decide:

Does the judge have authority (called jurisdiction) over you and the respondent?

Does the judge have reasonable cause to believe that the respondent poses a significant danger of causing personal injury to self or others in the near future?

If the judge decides you don't meet the legal requirements, the judge won't schedule a hearing. The judge must give you a written denial order explaining why you won't get a protection order. If you don't get a written denial order, ask for one. If you still don't get a denial order after asking for one, try to contact a lawyer as soon as you can.

You'll have 14 days from the date of the denial order to rewrite (amend) your petition with more information and ask the judge to review it again. Use the same case number to file your amended petition.

5. If you've asked for immediate protection and the judge decides you meet the legal requirements, the judge may issue a Temporary Extreme Risk Protection Order to start right away. It lasts until the judge has a hearing for the full order within 14 days.

If the judge doesn't give you immediate protection, you can still have the respondent served and go to a hearing to ask for a full protection order. Or you can withdraw your petition if you don't feel safe going forward without a Temporary Extreme Risk Protection Order in place. The respondent won't be served if you withdraw at this point.

If you didn't ask for immediate protection, the judge will schedule a hearing for a full order if you meet the legal requirements.

6. Service. Law enforcement must deliver the court papers (must serve) the respondent as soon as possible and must try again if they don't locate the person the first time they try to serve them. The clerk's office will send law enforcement a service packet with copies of all the documents to be served.

Your temporary order is legal and enforceable (is in effect) from the moment the judge signs it. But the police can only enforce the order if there's proof that the respondent was served with a copy of the order. Law enforcement should keep trying to serve the respondent right up to your hearing date.

The respondent must receive the papers at least 5 court days before the hearing. If the respondent is under age 18, their parents or legal guardians must also be served.

Service tip! Ask the clerk for a copy of the service packet to keep on hand. If law enforcement is called in an emergency, you can give the service packet to the officer on the scene to serve the respondent at that time. You might hear this called a "911 service packet."

Safety alert! If the judge issues a Temporary Extreme Risk Protection Order, the respondent must immediately surrender their firearms to law enforcement when they're served. If that doesn't happen for some reason, this could increase your level of risk. A domestic violence or other advocate (https://www.thehotline.org/) can help you do safety planning around this issue. You may call 9-1-1 to report if you believe the respondent still has weapons.

- 7. File proof of service. Law enforcement must fill out and file written proof of service (also called a "return of service" or "affidavit of service").
- 8. If the respondent hasn't been served, but you still need the temporary order, you must go to the full hearing and ask for an extension (a continuance) of the temporary order.

Safety alert! Even if you have a temporary extreme risk protection order, you must continue to take steps for you and your children to remain safe (https://www.domesticviolenceinforeferral.org/domestic-violence-programs?field_county_value=All&field_program_catagory_tid=2), especially around the time the order is served.

9. Full hearing. The judge decides here whether to issue a final Extreme Risk Protection Order that will last for a year.

3. Firearms surrender

If a judge orders a temporary or final ERPO, respondent must turn in their firearms to law enforcement. When and how respondent does this depends on how law enforcement serves the respondent with the court papers.

- If law enforcement hand-delivers the papers to respondent (called personal service), the officer will require respondent to immediately turn in all firearms. If the respondent doesn't do this, they may face criminal charges.
- If law enforcement must serve the respondent by other means, respondent must surrender all firearms to the local law enforcement agency within 24 hours of being served.

4. Hearing issues

If you know beforehand that you can't make the full hearing, contact the court clerk about rescheduling. Otherwise, if you simply don't go to your full hearing, the judge will dismiss your temporary order.

If the respondent hasn't been served 5 court days before your full hearing, you must still go to the hearing if you want the temporary order extended to allow time for service.

Even if the respondent didn't get 5 court days' notice but received the order, you can contact the police to enforce the order if there are any violations.

5. At hearing

In deciding whether to issue an ERPO, judge must consider facts about the respondent such as these:

- Recent acts or threats of violence against themselves or others, even if a firearm wasn't involved
- Pattern of violence or threats of violence against themselves or others
- Any behavior that's an imminent threat of harm to themselves or others
- Violation of a protection order or no-contact order
- They've already had an ERPO issued against them

- Conviction for a crime of domestic violence
 (http://app.leg.wa.gov/RCW/default.aspx?cite=10.99.020)
 (http://app.leg.wa.gov/RCW/default.aspx?cite=10.99.020) or other crime
 (http://app.leg.wa.gov/RCW/default.aspx?cite=9A.36.080)
- The respondent owns, intends to own, or has access to firearms
- Past unlawful use of a firearm
- A history of threatening, trying to, or actual use of physical force against someone else, or a history of stalking anyone
- Previous arrest for a felony offense or violent crime
- Proof of the respondent's abuse of drugs or alcohol
- Proof that the respondent has recently gotten firearms

If the respondent doesn't show up for the hearing and was properly served at least 5 court days before the full hearing, the judge can go ahead without the respondent. The respondent may need to be served afterwards with any order the judge makes at the hearing.

If the respondent does show up at the hearing, the judge may ask you and the respondent questions under oath or take declarations. Stand while speaking. If permitted, tell the judge briefly what you want and why. Try to keep your argument short. Only outline your main points. You may have as little as 5 minutes to speak. Don't repeat everything in your papers.

Each of you will get to tell your side of the case. If the judge asks you a question, try to answer it directly. Don't interrupt the judge.

After the judge has heard both sides, they'll make a decision. You may need to wait for the judge to write up the order. The clerk may give you a copy right away. If not, ask how you can get a copy.

6. After full hearing

What if I disagree with the court's decision?

Within 10 days after the entry of the order you can ask for reconsideration or revision. If the 10th day falls on a weekend or judicial holiday, your deadline is the next judicial day.

- Ask for reconsideration if the decision was legally incorrect or you have newly discovered evidence.
- Ask for revision if your case was decided by a court commissioner (not a judge), and you want a judge to review the same evidence.

File your motion for reconsideration or revision with the court clerk.

You can file an appeal within 30 days after entry of the order. You have the right to a transcript or recording of the hearing.

If new evidence would support issuing a protection order, you can refile a petition for a protection order at any time.

How is the order enforced?

Law enforcement will enter your Extreme Risk Protection Order in a statewide computer system. It's enforceable statewide and in other states.

You should call the police to report if the respondent breaks (violates) the order. This is a crime. The police must enforce your order and arrest the respondent.

Ask for a Hope Card! A Hope Card is a small card you can easily carry. It's one way to show you have a full protection order. You can request one at courts.wa.gov/hopecard/
(https://www.courts.wa.gov/hopecard/login.cfm). If you don't have a Hope Card, you should always carry a certified copy of your protection order with you.

Can the order be changed or terminated?

The respondent can file a motion to end (to terminate) the order, but only once within every 12-month period that the order is in effect. The respondent must prove that they don't pose a real risk of harm through firearms to self or others. They must prove this by a preponderance of the evidence—that it's more likely true than false. The forms to do this are available on the Washington Courts website (https://www.courts.wa.gov/forms/?fa=forms.static&staticID=14#ExtrRisk).

Neither party can file a motion to change (to modify) an extreme risk protection order.

Can the order be renewed?

You should get notice that your ERPO is expiring 105 calendar days beforehand. You can file a motion to renew your ERPO within 90 days before the order expires. Example: If your order expires Dec. 15, you can file a motion to renew as early as Sept. 16.

You can only renew an ERPO for one year at a time. To file this motion, get these forms (https://www.courts.wa.gov/forms/?fa=forms.static&staticID=14#ExtrRisk) from the Washington Courts website:

- XR 151, Motion to Renew Extreme Risk Protection Order
- XR 152, Order Setting Hearing: Motion to Renew Extreme Risk Protection Order
- XR 155, Order on Motion to Renew Extreme Risk Protection Order

7. Firearms return

When an ERPO ends, the respondent may ask law enforcement to return their firearms. Law enforcement must first check that the order has ended and there's no other legal reason to keep the firearms from the person.

If you're the respondent's intimate partner, relative, or household member, you can ask law enforcement to let you know that they're returning firearms to the respondent. Law enforcement should give you 5 days' notice of this. Email is best.

8. Forms

Use these forms to file for an ERPO against someone age 18 or older. To file against someone under age 18, you must fill out a different petition. You can get the Petition for an Extreme Risk Protection Order – Respondent Under 18 Years (form XR 201) on the Washington Courts website (https://www.courts.wa.gov/forms/?fa=forms.contribute&formID=106).

Law Enforcement and Confidential Information - Extreme Risk Protection Order (XR 105)

Form attached:

Temporary Extreme Risk Protection Order - Without Notice (XR 121)

Follow the general rules to format and fill out court documents.

To ask a judge for an ERPO, you must fill out and file at least the first 3 forms above. You may also need other forms depending on the situation:

- If you want to file written statements from other people in support of your petition, you can use a Declaration form
- If you want to file medical records or confidential reports, you'll need a Sealed Cover Sheet to protect privacy (keep them out of the public court record)

Tips for filling out petition

The more specific you can be in the Petition, the better.

In 1. Who is filing this petition, skip to the second box for "I am an intimate partner or family household member," check it, and then check everything that applies in that section.

Tips for filling out Firearm Identification Worksheet

Filling out this worksheet will help law enforcement know what weapons they need to get from the respondent. Answer the guestions as best you can.

Tips for filling out Law Enforcement and Confidential Information - Extreme Risk Protection Order

This form goes to your local law enforcement agency so they can enter the Extreme Risk Protection Order into the police computer. It's not served on the respondent. Fill out as much of the information requested as you can.

Tips for filling out Temporary Extreme Risk Protection Order

Some courts ask the petitioner to fill out a proposed order, but others will do this themselves. Ask the court clerk if you should fill out a proposed Temporary Extreme Risk Protection Order.
